Florida Police Chiefs Association Endorses Ashley Moody for United States Senate

Tallahassee, Fla. – The Florida Police Chiefs Association (FPCA) is proudly endorsing Ashley Moody for the United States Senate, reaffirming a relationship built on years of mutual trust, shared values, and an unshakable commitment to the safety of Florida’s law enforcement community.

This endorsement is not new ground for the FPCA. The association has proudly stood with Ashley Moody before, endorsing her for Attorney General and again when she was appointed to the United States Senate. Today, the FPCA reaffirms that support because Ashley Moody has never stopped earning it.

Few candidates understand the law enforcement community the way Ashley Moody does. She knows what it means to watch someone you love put on a badge and walk out the door, and to pray they come home safely. She does not need a briefing to understand the weight of this profession. She lives it every day, alongside the thousands of law enforcement families across this state who do the same.

FPCA President David Currey said, “Every chief in this association goes home at night thinking about one thing: making sure their officers get home too. Resourced properly. Supported mentally and physically. Treated with the dignity this job demands. Ashley Moody thinks about that too, not just as a senator, but as a law enforcement spouse. She gets it in a way that very few people in public life truly do.”

FPCA Immediate Past President Robert Bage said, “The Florida Police Chiefs Association is proud to endorse Ashley Moody for the United States Senate. Ashley has stood with law enforcement at every level, in every role she has held. She understands this community not just as a policy matter, but personally and deeply, as someone who is part of it. There is no stronger advocate for the men and women who serve, and there is no one more deserving of our full and enthusiastic support.”

FPCA 2nd Vice President John Barkley said, “Florida’s law enforcement community has a long memory and a deep sense of loyalty. Ashley Moody has been with us through some of the most challenging years this profession has faced. She has never wavered, never walked away, and never stopped fighting for the people who keep our communities safe. We are proud to stand with her again.”
